

One Light/Reflector Set Up

The basic idea behind this set up is for someone who does not want to invest in lighting equipment or simply wants to do a one time set up for a portrait shot or table top still life using items you can easily find around the house.

You will take a couple of different shots changing the white balance on your camera to match the light source without using the on camera flash while adjusting the aperture and shutter speed to get the proper exposure.

You also learn a couple of simple tips on modeling the light by repositioning the subject or the light or reflector.